Hi Rusty,

I attached some potentially helpful information on the transfer/redevelopment. The redevelopment negotiations were reported back after they were worked out between the City of San Francisco/Navy. The pdf is a summary of the transfer and redevelopment plans. The word file is the redevelopment story from the city.

The Navy has only talked about transferring properties via FOST ("Finding of Suitability to Transfer"), which means the land transfers after CERCLA action has already been taken. The regulatory role in the transfer is to make sure the sites are suitable for the planned/designated use (no direct "oversight of the planning" or role in financing the redevelopment). The City is responsible for the redevelopment planning.

Because TI is not an NPL site, EPA is a member of the cleanup "team," but we do not sign site decision documents. We provide input to the Navy (lead agency) and the State (lead regulatory agency) but do not have oversight authority. This is important for the interviewee to know.

Right, so sorry that totally skipped my mind!

Here are her questions in her own words:

I'm working on a lengthy package about the redevelopment of Treasure Island. Generally speaking I'd like to ask Jared about oversight of the planning, the project as it stands now and whether he has concerns, and the financing. I'd of course love everything to be on the record, but we can figure that out as the conversation goes along.

If it's possible, it would great to meet in person and wherever is convenient for Jared. Wouldn't be more than an hour, and I suspect closer to half an hour. I always tape my interviews for both our benefit and use it only for note taking purposes. Nothing would end up on air.

Thanks Rusty!
Cara
